EXPERT VIEW: It's clear RIP WHEELER brings the most potential of these, being a former point winner who signed off last season with his best effort to date under rules at this course, just denied in a handicap hurdle. His stable hit form on Sunday and he can make a winning start to his chasing career. Goodbyemick has yet to win, but he's been running with credit in various headgear and rates a solid enough candidate, while Lord Maher, like the selection just a 5yo, was running an improved race when brought down at Fontwell last time and could have a say stepping back up in trip.
